Your recent letter relative to employment by this Agency has been referred to us for reply.

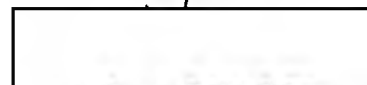

It is regretted that you apparently misunderstood the letter addressed to you on 8 June. This letter states that your name had been referred to CIA as an individual who might be qualified for a position with us and requested information as to whether you were interested in such a possibility. There was no intent to make any final offer of a position.

After receiving and reviewing your application, we found that your qualifications did not fit the position for which you were considered, and our reply of 19 June was intended to convey that fact.

As we indicated in our letter of 11 July, we have retained your application in our active prospect file and should a vacancy occur at some time in the future for which your qualifications appear to fit, we will contact you.

Again the apparent misunderstanding in this matter is regretted, and your continued interest is appreciated.

Sincerely,

Acting Executive
